CURRENC' SITUATION IN SOUTH KORKA

- 1. A well-planned comp executed by some 3,600 army troops and marines in Seoul overthrew the government of Frime Minister Chang Myon on 15 May. The insurgents seized the Seoul radio station and broadcast orders over the name of Army Chief of Staff Lt. General Chang To-youg establishing martial law throughout the Mation.
- 2. The leader of the revolt is Major General Pak Chang-hui who still exercises the real gover in the Military Revolutionary Committee government. Pak, a one-time officer in the Japanese army, was commissioned in the Korean army in 1946. He was court-martialed in 1948 on charges of being a Communist and was sentenced to 10 years in prison. Pak was recalled to service at the outbreak of the Korean War in 1950 and subsequently pardoned because of his war record. He is not known to have re-established contacts with the Communists or to have been connected with South Korean laftist groups since 1948. Following the ouster of the Rhee regime, Pak was involved in the agitation of younger officers to rid the army of senior officers who allegedly had profited from their support of Rhee.
- 3. The coup leaders were able to establish control easily because of the absence of any resistance in Secul and the public indifference or epathy shown in other areas. The prime minister went into hiding and made no effort to rally any forces against the coup. The Army Chief of Staff, General Chang To-yong, masumed a cautious role endeavoring to maintain a favorable position with the coup leaders and the American side. Chang still holds the spotlight as head of the Military Revolutionary Committee, but he is probably a figurehead.

- 4. President Tun Po-sun used his influence for a compromise that would provide a semblance of legality for the coup actions and put the government transition within a framework of constitutionality.
- 5. Prime Minister Chang Myon emerged from hiding on 18 May and broadcast that the martial law proclaimed by Lt. General Chang To-yong as chairman of the Military Revolutionary Committee was legal. He ennounced the resignation of his cabinet opening the way for transitional measures that would be legal under the Constitution. This significantly strengthens the political position of the counittee.
- 6. The military base for the governing committee was secured on 17 May when the commander of the First Army Lt. General Yi Ean-lim publicly declared his support of the coup.

government is likely to parmit extreme right-wing elements associated with the Rhee regime to return to power. The American embassy reports that the revolutionary presently lacks personnel capable of dealing with economic problems and has no real economic program. The embassy believes the constitute is probably counting on former government officials with economic

- 8. The possibility of former Blue officials gaining influence is indicated by a consored newspaper report on 17 May that a cabinet of elders had been established. This included Fuck Eak-chun (George Fack), I'l Pou-sol, Fyon Yong-ten, Kim Hong-il, Fuck Tu-chin and Song Yo-chan.
- 9. The revolutionary government is moving to enforce its anticommunist program. The staff of the leftist newspaper Minjok Ilbo and the editor of Minquk Ilbo have been arrested. The arrest of all persons on a Communist Watch List--reported to comprise 70,000 persons, including families, friends and associates--has been ordered. A proclamation calls for all spies to surrender by 20 June under a promise of lemient treatment. After that date all spies that are apprehended will be given capital punishment.
- 10. Initial communist reaction betrayed a lack of information. Subsequent commant labelled the coup leaders reactionary and warned against US interference. There has been no evidence of any military reaction on the part of North Korea to the coup.
